Just Launched The Magic of Madeira Lifestyle & property magazine

For many years Madeira has been well known for its superb year-round weather and the rich natural beauty of the Madeira flora and fauna, fed by the fertile volcanic soil. And of course the clean fresh air and majestic beaches, over 20 certified Blue Flag beaches, have drawn from an increase in health and wellness provided by such a place as Madeira.

Health and wellbeing tourism is constantly increasing according to the Portuguese National Tourist Office and the Portuguese Chamber of Commerce in the UK and is predicted to rise by 5-10% by 2015. This is of interest as at a major conference on Health and wellbeing held at the beginning of November, Madeira has been identified for its potential in this increasing market.

Madeira airport was initially launched in 1963, full of eager passengers from Germany, Scandinavia and the United Kingdom seeking winter sun and a Mediterranean alternative to the Costa del Sol package holidays. This is still true today with Madeira attracting a discerning profile of tourists all year long. Luxury cruise arrivals to the archipelago are very popular with Funchal, the capital, still a favourite stop on the Atlantic cruise routes.

Easy access.

It is now getting begin flights from Manchester airport from 3rd May 2010 for as little as £49.99 one way (including taxes) to Funchal.

Ian Doubtfire, Managing Director at Jet2.com comments,

“Madeira is a stunning island and an absolutely fantastic summer holiday destination which I am sure will be extremely popular with our customers in the North West and beyond.”

Duarte Ferreira, Director at Madeira Airport, goes on to say,

“The launch of this new scheduled route is extremely positive news for Madeira and will open up this beautiful region to many more visitors. The creation of this brand new link, especially at a time when other operators are looking to cut costs and services, plays such an important role for tourism in the region, benefiting the local economy and people working and living on the island. We hope that this partnership with Jet2.com will result in the opening of several new routes from the UK in the near future.”

This is great news for people seeking a nice holiday, the increasing number of people choosing Madeira property as another home or vacation home destination, and of course property investors capitalising on the increasing popularity of this magical island.
