Nice Cities In America For A Honeymoon

Nowadays, lots of people who are tying the knot are looking for less expensive locations for their honeymoon, since weddings have become pretty pricey and since the economy is in a Recession. What many people do not realize is that the United States offers a wide variety of options for those who wish to stay in the country. States like California and Florida are home to cities such as: San Diego, Los Angeles, Napa, Miami, Tampa, and islands such as Key West, Key Largo, and Marco Island. For example, New Hampshire real estate and Vermont real estate have seen a large rise in the amount of people who are renting homes in the area for their honeymoon. Below is a list of cities located in America that are great for honeymooners:

1. There is a large number of cities in California that would make for a nice honeymoon. Napa Valley would be a really nice decision because there is a lot to do and it is a very relaxed atmosphere. In Napa, you can find really cute bed and breakfasts that are a fair amount cheaper than staying in a hotel. Also, San Diego is a great place to visit on the trip as well. The zoo is world famous and there are many water activities in which honeymooners can attempt to do. Another nice thing about San Diego, that it is warm pretty much year-round, so you do not have to worry too much about coordinating your wedding and the trip afterward.

2. Similar to California, there are a decent number of cities that are great for a honeymoon in the state of Florida. Miami, of course, is a great place to have a vacation because it is warm throughout the year and there is so much to do and see. There are lots of pretty fantastic beaches too. Florida is also home to Key West and Marco Island, both of which are very nice honeymoon options. All of these places also have a Caribbean-like relaxed atmosphere. The nice thing about going to an island that is part of the U.S., is that there will not be a language barrier, so when ordering food or if there is an emergency, you should not have any kind of problem.

3. The Northeastern part of the United States is also really beautiful and maybe surprisingly, honeymoon destination. There are lots of quaint towns with very many family owned bed and breakfasts, which are usually a lot cheaper than a hotel. The nice thing about this location is that because the area is considerably smaller than the rest of the areas in the U.S., so you can go to different states and see a lot of sites. If you have accommodations outside of the big cities, site-seeing around Boston would make for a great one-day or two-day visit. This is a good area to visit in the spring or summer, and some months of early fall. As a general warning, it may be a wise choice to stay away from this area in the winter simply because of the snow storms that usually occur during the winter months.

Many U.S. cities offer plenty of great, Recession proof honeymoon destinations. An increasing number of people have made the realization that U.S. locations can be just as amazing, if not better than honeymoon destinations outside of the country. However, with the right planning, any location the couple decides to visit will be perfect as long as they make the most of the place they select!
